

Social and Personal

The parlors of the Woman's Club were crowded with members and guests yesterday afternoon when Mrs. William Tom Robins presented his latest story, "The Molyedde." Mrs. Robins has an inimitable charm of manner and a great deal of magnetism, and her audience was fascinated with her story.

The tale was very simply told. It was about a small boy that really lived in the getting that Mrs. Robins placed about him, and the incidents related were just as real as the little boy and the old Gloucester home in which he lived. Since the mind of the world is considering the child just now in all his manifold moods, "The Molyedde" is only another phase of the heart and soul of a very small boy brought to a very happy conclusion.

Mrs. Robins has a style all her own, and the story that she read was unfolded with a great deal of quaint humor and delicious touches. She has already read "The Molyedde" in several other stories recently published, and her audience was most enthusiastic in its reception of the authors.

The club parlors were decorated in white, and Mrs. Edward Valentine, assisted by Mrs. Alard Clarke, poured coffee. Mrs. John McArthur and Mrs. John S. Moncre were at the luncheon table.

The Confederate Ball will take place this evening at 9 o'clock in the ball room of the Masonic Temple. It is going to be a perfectly wonderful ball, and distinguished guests from all parts of the State are in Richmond to attend.

The most fascinating old gown that actually graced the drawing rooms of at least half a century ago will be worn by many of the women present, and the occasion will be one of unusual brilliancy and charm. The sale will be given with the uniforms of the men belonging to military organizations and will be hung with bright flags and spring flowers. The ball will be opened with a grand march and some of the most popular music of the evening. The gallery is to be thrown open for those who do not care to dance, and, by the way, only square dances will be in order at this lovely old-fashioned ball.

Polk Miller and Tom Booker, "the two old Confederates," are going to be the musical stars and will have three other musicians with them, who will call out the figures and make things go. To those who remember "Swing your partners," "Ladies to the center" and "Call hands round" the music will be a welcome reminder to the generation of today. It will be an occasion of grace and love. Mrs. N. V. Randolph is in charge of the invitations, and all information may be obtained from her.

There will be a great many wonderful old gowns worn this evening, some of these are more than passing interest. The wife of the Governor of Virginia, who will assist in receiving, will wear a wonderful old gown that has been in her family for sixty years. It is an ivory-colored moire, yards and yards wide and of exactly the same pattern as it was so many years ago when it came on a journey across the seas for its wearer.

The bodice is trimmed in old rose point lace, and Mrs. Mann will wear some pearls that are also heirlooms. Her husband will be in light pink laces, and Mrs. Mann will wear a dress of tulle. Another interesting gown will be that of Mrs. Elyson, wife of Lieutenant-Governor J. Taylor Elyson. Mrs. Elyson's gown was bought for her trousseau in the sixties, and it is a very magnificent affair indeed. It measures five yards around the bottom of the skirt, and is gathered full at the waist. It is fashioned of black silk poplin striped with crimson and is made with a train. There are trimmings of duchesse lace about the neck and sleeves, and Mrs. Elyson will wear cameo ornaments.

Mrs. William Robert Vawter, who is chairman of the ball, will wear a quaint affair of lavender satin made with an overskirt of gray chiffon looped up with violets. Some rare old lace trims the bodice, and Mrs. Vawter will also wear cameo jewelry. Mrs. George W. Harrington will wear hoops. Her gown is also an heirloom and is made of flowered silk and trimmed with an old lace bertha. She will wear a pearl belt buckle that is 150 years old, and was worn by her great-great-aunt at her wedding. Mrs. Harrington's costume will be completed with some old lace rings and a gold-fashioned hoop earrings of brilliant cut.

A lavender and white tulle affair under satin will be the gown of Mrs. Lee Kolner. Both the skirt and bodice are trimmed with chiffon, and a panel of white tulle trims the front of the skirt. Mrs. W. W. Huntley will also wear hoops. Her gown is a dear old white organdie made with a lace fichu and finished with ruffles around the bottom. She will wear long earrings and an old brooch.

Miss Sidney Johnston Dudley will be gowned in a very old canary-colored silk with a long skirt and trimmed with fastenings of gauze of the same shade. The neck is cut square, and the sleeves are old-fashioned puff sleeves. Mrs. Dudley's ornaments will be cameo jewelry. Mrs. J. B. Pace will wear a mail of the fashion of the sixties, made with a ruffled skirt and trimmed in lace.

Mrs. Norman V. Randolph is going to wear an old black silk gown with a kerchief and cap and some old lace. Her daughter, Miss Rita Randolph, will wear her mother's wedding gown of champagne-colored tulle trimmed with real lace.

Miss Anita Cussen will be gowned in a quaint white satin wedding dress that has been worn by both her grandmother and her mother at their wedding. She will wear pearl ornaments and carry an old-fashioned bag of pink. Miss Warfield Crenshaw is going to wear her great-grandmother's gown of pale blue brocade trimmed with duchesse lace, and she will carry pink buds fringed with lace.

Several hundred guests will be present, and there will be no many beautiful old gowns there that have been worn by so many beautiful women of the past two generations. It is going to be a lovely ball.

The car for Highland Park will not leave until 12:15, and will leave at 12:30 o'clock this evening in order to accommodate the residents of that suburb who will be present at the ball.

A. P. V. A. Excursion.
All sorts of interesting parties are being made up to go to Jamestown on Saturday with the Association for the Preservation of the Virginia Antiquities. Most of the hostesses of these parties have already made their arrangements, and all are asked to do so before Saturday if possible by the chairman of the committee. Tickets may be procured at the Virginia Historical Society, Rooming Library, and at Briggs's drugstore, corner of Harrison and Grove Avenue. Miss Bettie Elyson is chairman of the luncheon committee, and luncheon will be served on board the Peconiche. The boat leaves the wharf promptly at 8 o'clock on Saturday morning.

Chesterfield Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, met at the home of Mrs. P. A. Fore, 1091 West Grace Street, on Saturday afternoon. A report from the Arlington section was read, and invitations from Oldwood and Hollywood Memorial Association were also read and accepted. Flowers were sent to Johnson's Island, where 700 Confederate soldiers are buried, and the Confederate ball was enthusiastically discussed.

An auxiliary to this chapter was organized with good prospects for a large membership. The meeting adjourned to meet again on the first Saturday in July at the home of Mrs. Walter T. Allen, 304 South Third Street.

Auxiliary Meeting.
The granddaughters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Chapter No. 1, held their monthly meeting Friday afternoon at the Young Women's Christian Association.

There was a large attendance, and many new blanks were brought in. The principal feature of the meeting was the presentation of a handsome silk Confederate flag to the chapter. The flag was the gift of Mrs. Mollie Magall Rosenberg, of Galveston, Tex., and was presented by her grandniece, Miss Alice Macgill, of Richmond. Little Emmett Perkins, an ensign, received the flag, and in a very happy little speech pledged the chapter's allegiance to the lost yet cherished Confederacy. As he waved the flag aloft, the children sang "Dixie." Mrs. Rosenberg gave also, as the beginning of a library to interest the children in the Confederate cause, "The Immortal Six Hundred."

All applications for membership blanks must be made to Mrs. B. A. Gasser, registrar of the Richmond Chapter, and it is urged that blanks be returned by June 1, the next meeting of the chapter will be held on June 11.

Meetings To Day.
Williams Memorial Circle of Kings Daughters will meet this afternoon at 4 o'clock with Mrs. Young Jones, step 8, on the Westhampton car line.

An attractive musical program has been arranged and some of the prominent musicians taking part are: Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Martenstein, Miss Edith Platt, Miss Cassady, Miss Phillips, and several others of note.

Visiting Friends.
Mrs. S. G. Tinsley and Miss Jennie Tinsley, of 1922 West Grace Street, have left Richmond for an extended visit to friends. Mrs. Tinsley and Miss Tinsley will visit in Clifton Forge, Huntington, Va., and St. Louis. They expect to return to their home in this city some time in September.

Engagement Announced.
Mr. and Mrs. William Watson James, of Round Hill, announce the engagement of their daughter, Lucile, to Joseph Carr Rogers, of Hamilton. The wedding will take place June 1. On account of illness in the groom's family, no invitations will be issued.

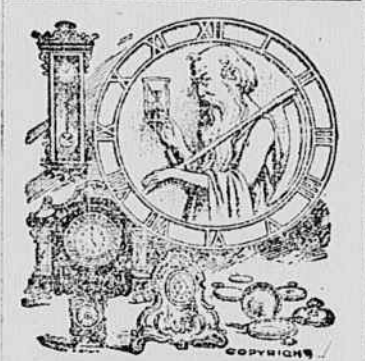

Miss James was educated at the Woman's College in this city, and has a great many friends in Richmond. Carpenter-Cason.
Mrs. Philip Andrew Cason announces the approaching marriage of her daughter, Jane Porter, to Cranston Howe Carpenter, of Denver, Col. The wedding will take place to-morrow and will be very quietly celebrated owing to the bride's mourning.

POLICY-HOLDERS EIGHT MERGER

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Raleigh, N. C., May 13.—Sixty odd policyholders present in person and $50,000 in policies was the representation at the meeting of policyholders of the Raleigh and Wake counties in the Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company this afternoon, to take preliminary steps for opposing the merger of Jefferson Standard and Greensboro Life Insurance Companies, on the ground that the merger would be detrimental to the security of the policies in the Jefferson Standard organization under the name of the Jefferson Standard policyholders.

A protective association was perfected by selecting R. W. Winston as president and C. H. Underwood as secretary and treasurer. C. W. Barber, chairman, and J. H. Poul, J. B. Johnson, J. F. Farrell, Raleigh, and W. T. Dorch, Goldsboro, constitute a board of managers.

An assessment of $1 per thousand was authorized with authority to add as much as $3 per thousand if the cost of the impending litigation requires it. R. C. Strong, A. R. D. Johnson and A. B. Andrews, Jr., were designated as a special committee to present the grievances of the policyholders to the State Commissioner of Insurance, Hon. James R. Young, at once.

ORDER IN WILL CASE.
Circuit Court at Marion Disposed of Important Chancery Cause.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Marion, Va., May 13.—In the Circuit Court here last week, a case was disposed of involving a question of considerable interest. It was the chancery cause of Lillie V. Seaver, widow of the late W. C. Seaver, vs. M. M. Seaver and Geo. W. Seaver, M. M. Seaver being the administrator. The widow being dissatisfied with the provisions made for her by her husband in his will entered into a contract with the defendants, whereby she was to receive certain considerations in addition to the provisions of the will. Becoming dissatisfied with this contract, she entered a formal renunciation of the will and brought suit to set aside the contract, upon the grounds that she was not fully advised of her rights, at the time of making it. The estate was valued at $65,000. The court declined to set aside the contract, but entered an order directing the defendants to pay the complainant $40 monthly, in addition to the benefits secured to her by the will.

Miss Gasser Miller left last week for China Grove, N. C., whither she went to act as bridesmaid, at the marriage of her cousin, Miss Zella Corriher.

Rev. J. J. Scherer, accompanied by his granddaughter, Miss Catherine Copenhagen, left for Richmond, Wednesday. From thence Dr. Scherer will go to Newport News, to attend the annual session of the Grand Lodge of L. O. O. F., of which he is grand chaplain.

An old-fashioned spelling match was given at the Courthouse, Friday night, for the benefit of the Daughters of the Confederacy. None under twenty was permitted to enter the contest. Ex-player John P. Sheffey won the prize of $5 in gold. Miss May Scherer was his last contestant going down on the word Mnemonic.

Davis-Hicks.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Fredericksburg, Va., May 13.—Walter Davis and Miss Ada Hicks, both of Madison county, were married a few days ago. The civil ceremony was performed at the Courthouse, Rev. M. C. Frazer performing the ceremony.

SAYS UNKIND THINGS CONCERNING MOBILITY

Certain Functionary in Paris Beginning to Make Himself Hated.

BY LA MARQUESE DE FONSECOY.
THERE is just now a certain functionary in Paris, who, thanks to his connection with the Department of Foreign Affairs, has acquired a great vogue in cosmopolitan society there as "aristocrat, elegant, and who may be found leading the cotillon at many dances, especially those given by the American colony, as well as playing an important role in the getting up of private theatricals and other amateur entertainments. There is nothing in his birth or breeding to warrant any such presumption on his part, and it is a wonder to me that he has until now been endured by the people he really claims to patronize.

Recently this person had actually the impudence to issue a note entitled "La Saison," in which he has a great deal that is ill-natured and unkind to say about the genuinely old and ex-him an absolute terra incognita. He deals incidentally with the old aristocracy, and the ultra-exclusive sets at Vienna, London and St. Petersburg, which he knows very little about indeed.

However, he is beginning to make himself hated everywhere, and as a case in point, I may cite and discuss his book the other day, a French great lady remarked, "I think I know why the amateur author is so hard on all of us. For he has never forgotten something that happened when he was at Vienna, connected somehow with a diplomatic mission. As you know, the Austrian court is very strict in matters of etiquette, and the slightest departure from established usages is severely criticized. By some of this new arrival was invited to an afternoon reception at the archduchess, and was informed that he would be expected to take a case in point, at the time he was invited to the palace. In the time he was invited to the palace, and when the moment came for him to be summoned to the tennis court, he walked majestically down the steps and distinguished company already assembled there. In a moment more, a foreigner stood at his side, and slowly pulling off his overcoat, which he negligently flung to the man, appeared before the amazed eyes of the onlookers in full evening dress, with white cravat, patent leather shoes, etc., etc. The Austrians are a merry people, and half smothered burst of laughter.

came from the spectators, who, ashamed to show impatience in any loud tone, fled from the spot, leaving him entirely alone on the field. In solitary enjoyment of his magnificent surroundings, he added that he had the good sense to leave Vienna as soon as possible. For, dense as may be his intellect, he had on this occasion no chance to overlook his extravagant lack of manner. "This," added the French lady in question, "is the secret of his severity towards all well-mannered and distinguished people."

Of course it must be admitted that young men who get into such choice circles without preliminary training in that etiquette consists of, here, there and everywhere, are under a great handicap. They start at a disadvantage, thoroughly posted, not only as to the social usages of the best class of their own native land, but also as to the peculiarities of the countries to which they may possibly go.

Thus, here and in England men attending an evening party, dinner, etc., know, for example, how to leave their "reques" opera hats—with their coats. It is a few fashion "chicks" being slowly taken up, strange to say, by other countries.

For many years it was imperative for a man to know this "fashioned" gear, and to appear in a "fashion" without carrying it under his arm would have been looked upon as almost as great a lapse of good manners as to have forgotten his necktie or any other indispensable portion of his evening attire.

To be sure, in some European capitals this is still strictly the rule, and the story is told in an Englishman who not so very long ago wrecked his social career from the outset by appearing at a soiree given by Princess Lomax, he had not carried the "fashioned" gear, and to appear in a "fashion" without carrying it under his arm would have been looked upon as almost as great a lapse of good manners as to have forgotten his necktie or any other indispensable portion of his evening attire.

I must add that for the occasion this "clever" youth had attired himself in the most irreproachable costume, that his tie and waistcoat were drama, that the fit of coat and trousers could not have been better. Nevertheless, the city of the world, also that he carried himself with a correctness and elegance which alone would have been enough to have made more than one man proud of his complete lack of technique. "The coat makes the man," and whilst under a shabby and neglected attire and inside an uncouth body often dwells a soul of rare merit, the most valuable individual may make himself not only preposterous, but extremely acceptable by his unimpeachable attire and outward decorum.

I once knew a diplomat who, tall, broad-shouldered, handsome and well set up, possessed the courtliest and most "Louis Quatorze" manners. He became rapidly the idol of the society of the capital, which will remain unnamed—where he "assisted" in representing his country. Everybody talked of him, of his horses, of his fetes he gave, of his magnificent dinners on every possible occasion. His mode of dressing was copied by the gilded youth of the city, his very way of dropping the monocle—attached to an almost invisible elastic thread—from his large, plus incredibly pale eye, was to everybody the last cry of chic and elegance. He danced badly, it is true, and rode worse. But his impeccable dandy and harness, his British dress suits, and unspeakably well fitting morning coats, as well as his riding gear, somehow or other disguised these unfortunate defects so well that he finally began to acquire the reputation of being one of the most perfect diplomats that had ever been sent to that particular embassy. The ambassador himself was a wonderfully brilliant and clever man. But his every "coup" ended by being attributed to his having at his side so efficient an apt counsellor. Nevertheless, notwithstanding, this still young man—great in his way—finally came to the point where, being forced from their spoiling and adulation to believe in himself, he brought forth two great and highly esteemed countries to the verge of war; and it was only then that his inaptitude—not to say complete ineptitude—was roughly unveiled, much to the shame and distress of those admirers who had crowded around him, acclaiming him as a future Talleyrand.

All this—without citing any names—leads one to believe that it might perhaps not be a bad idea to require that all diplomatic candidates as well as social ones should first go through a sartorial preparation and examination, not to mention a few months under the tuition of a French master of dancing and deportment. But then, trotted up and down in a kind of refined "awkward" before a board composed of ex-ambassadors who in their time were genuine beaux. The politics of to-day, however, being more, being so entangled in all the countries of the universe, that even Talleyrand's extraordinary brain would recoil before their intricacies.
